reached him that the Constitutionalists and Federals at Tampico had arranged a truce, the Federals occupying the outhern bank and the Constitutionalists the northern bank of the Panuco River in the vicinity of that city.

Officials Not Disappointed.

While the United States officials are earnestly desirous of a peaceful settlement of the Mexican situation, there is good reason to believe they are not greatly disappointed at Carranza's refusal to enter into an armistice. The fundamental principle of President Wilson's Mexican policy is that Huerta must go and this end now seems more likely to be achieved through the quick success of the Constitutionalist forces than through the slow process of mediation negotiations. There is no doubt in Washington that the Wilson Administration now has a very definite plan of campaign in mind in Mexico. It proposes to hold Vera Cruz and starve Huerta through the shutting off of his principal source of revenue and ammunition, while the Constitutionalists sweep on victoriously from the north to Mexico city.

Washington Government hourly expecting news of the fall of Tampico into the hands of the Constitutionalists and Villa already is in the field and moving for the capture of

The probable fall of these two cities within the next few days will, accordng to the information that has reached Washington, mark the end of Huerta's government in Mexico city. An uprising against the dictator has been smouldering for several days, and these new reverses, it is contended, will fan the fire of discontent into a flame.

Evidence of a break in Huerta's official family has already appeared in the enforced resignation of Senor Portillo y Rojas as Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs. He has been regarded as one of the most conservative and able of Huerta's counsellors and has been commended personally even by President

There are rumors that Gen. Blanquet, who was notorious for the part that he played in turning upon Madero and assisting Huerta to power, is now showing signs of weakening in his support of the dictator. Blanquet is Huerta's Minister of War, and if his power should be thrown the latter Huerta's last hope would be gone.

The stand taken by Carranza to-day against entering into any armistice with Huerta will probably result in restricting the work of the mediators to the settlement of the acute situation between the United States and Huerta, if the latter continues to hold on in Mexico city. At this time, however, the mediators have no intention of giving up entirely their efforts to bring about an adjustment of Mexico's internal differences. They intend to go ahead with their original programme, even if the forces of Huerta and Carranza continue hostilities in the field. One of the suggestions to be made by the mediators is that both Carranza and Huerta shall resign their pretensions to the provisional Presidency and that a third man acceptable to both factions shall be named to act as provisional President until a constitutional election that the provisional account of the suggestions to be made by the mediators is that both Carranza and the provisional Presidency and that a third man acceptable to both factions shall be named to act as provisional President until a constitutional election that a constitution between the brought from Progress and docked in South Brooklyn yesterday morning, brought twelve refugees, all circus performers, who were driven out of Merida, the capital of Yucatan, twenty-six files south of the port of Progresso, under the capital of Yucatan, twenty-six files south of the port of Progresso, under the capital of Yucatan, twenty-six files south of the port of Progresso, under the capital of Yucatan, twenty-six files south of the port of Progresso, under the capital of Yucatan, twenty-six files south of the port of Progresso, and the capital of Yucatan, twenty-six the work of the mediators to the settle-the country. They have contended for a long time that the United States would find itself in just as difficult resituation then as it is now. The answer of this Government is that with Carranza and the Constitutionalists in control at Mexico city the United States will immediately be able to extend recognition and throw its great influence and power to the support of the new Government in Mexico.

In the meantime it is pointed out that most of the Americans have left Mexico and this Government is now in a better condition than it has ever been before to meet any conditions of anarchy that might arise through the change in government.
